While the landscape for self-care in family planning (FP) is rapidly evolving, limited data are available to understand what information or services women are interested in within the context of self-care and their preferences for accessing desired information and services. Evidence is also lacking on whether needs and choices of individuals vary across different groups.

PURPOSE
The USAID-funded Research for Scalable Solutions (R4S) Project developed a self-care module that was added to the female questionnaire of the PMA survey in Kenya (National Phase 3, 2021/2022) and Nigeria (Kano and Lagos States Phase 3, 2021). The goal of the module is to learn about women’s interests and preferences related to key FP self-care interventions listed by the World Health Organization¹, including digital information provision and FP methods—specifically oral contraceptive pills, emergency contraceptives, and injectables, methods that women may be able to administer themselves—including which service delivery channels women may be interested in obtaining these products from and what kinds of support they may want from a health provider for these methods.

USE
The survey questions are presented as a menu of questions that can be integrated into existing data collection platforms or studies. It is assumed that some background information would be collected as part of the broader platform or study within which the module is being used. All or a subset of questions may be included depending on available resources and the specifics of the design (e.g. cross-sectional vs. longitudinal, target population).

If you are planning on using these questions, please email us at R4Sinfo@fhi360.org and we can provide you with a Word version of the survey module.
